

REMARKABLE LUNCHEON TO ENVOYS

Given by Prince Chun and Served in the Chinese Style

Peking, May 3.—Prince Chun, the regent of China, gave a remarkable luncheon at the winter palace today, to the foreign envoys who gathered here to attend the funeral ceremonies on May 1st of the late emperor, Kuang Hsi. The repast was served in foreign style.

Among the Chinese present were Prince Ching, former president of the foreign affairs and now adviser to the naval department; Prince Tsai Chin, son of Prince Ching, once president of the board of commerce; Prince Su, of the naval department; Prince Posen and Liang Tin Ye, president of the board of foreign affairs. After the entertainment the envoys expressed themselves as unusually impressed with the personality of the regent.

The Chinese authorities have shown special favors to Prince Fushin, the Japanese envoy to the funeral ceremonies, and this discrimination at the expense of the other delegates has caused irritation.

Costs to Be Charitable.

A New York trackman left his big white horse within seeing and smelling distance of a big pile of fine fruit on an old woman's applestand. The Post says the horse craned his neck and showed his desire for a bite plainly enough, but the old woman shook her head:

"Gwan, y' old blarney," she exclaimed.

But the horse did not "gwan." Instead he advanced one hoof upon the sidewalk.

"Would ye see that, now," the woman said. "Well, 'tis such a human way y' have."

She gave him an apple and turned away, muttering: "'Tis expensive to be charitable."

Van Vlissingen has acknowledged forgeries to the amount of nearly a million dollars. He implicates Maurice Rosenberg and Maurice Rosenberg by testifying they were cognizant for four years of the fact that he was uttering forged notes and mortgages. COMPLETED STORY OF CRIME

Peter Van Vlissingen Tells of Twenty Years of Forgeries

Chicago, Ill., May 3.—Peter Van Vlissingen, the former real estate man, who is serving a sentence for forgery amounting to $1,600,000 completed the story of his twenty years of crime before Referee in Bankruptcy Frank L. Wea today.

Van Vlissingen was questioned again as to his relations with Bernard Rosenberg and Maurice Rosenberg, who he declared, forced him to carry on more forgeries in order to pay back what he had received from them after he had confessed his practices to them in 1934. He named several men whom he had told Rosenberg and Rosenberg that he was victimizing.

"Rosenfeld, particularly, was hounding me to death for money," said Van Vlissingen. "I was getting it faster than I could get it out of my pocket."

"Did you tell Rosenberg and Rosenberg how you made the forgeries and about the electric light system that you used?"

"Yes," he replied. "How much bogus paper did you redeem between the years 1901 and 1908?"

"About $1,000,000 in bogus paper," he replied.

"When you paid Rosenberg and Rosenberg money, did they return you a specified paper?"

"Sometimes," he replied.

Van Vlissingen said that Rosenberg and Rosenberg had returned to him $70,000 worth of forged paper during the last four years.

"How much of this paper did you redeem?"

"I don't know," he replied.

"Kussim."

Forty-one Georgians stood around the death-bed of old Mr. Perkins, their rich relative, and shed tears as the hand of death was laid upon his brow.

When the will was opened, and they found that he had left all his property to found a college, 41 Georgians started for home exclaiming: "Kussim."

ARMING SAFES WITH DEADLY GASES.

A chemical company has devised a grenade or glass receptacle filled with a chemical compound, as a means of making it impossible for safes to be opened after they have been closed.

It is an inoffensive-looking article, about two inches in diameter and five inches long. Inside of the exterior tube are seven smaller ones, each filled with a different chemical.

When the door of the safe is blown, or the safe is jarred heavily, the grenade explodes, and the air is filled with the deadly fumes. It is claimed that these fumes, which so far as effect is concerned, are not unlike the gases from the deadly Chinese "stink pots," are powerful enough to make breathing impossible and to force all persons near the safe to retreat or be almost instantly suffocated.

The grenades are made with a lasting effect of from six to ten hours, depending upon the size, and are placed just back of the locking mechanism of the safe doors.—Popular Mechanics.

THE CHARM OF WOMAN.

Man is so affected by the charms of woman and offers so easy a mark for her machinations as to invite exploitation. Having been evolved largely through the stimulus of the female presence, he continues to be more profoundly affected by her presence and behavior than by any other stimulus whatever, unless it be the various forms of combat.—American Magazine.
